BELLEFONTE MAY GET WATER PAINT FACTORY

Morris Liveright, of Philadelphia, Considering Locating Here.

LIME CHIEF INGREDIENT

Manufacturer Visits Town and Tells Local Business Men That if He Concludes to Locate Here No Financial Assistance Will be Needed.

The prospects are exceedingly bright for Bellefonte receiving the benefit of a new industry in the shape of a factory for the manufacture of water paint. Morris Liveright, well known to many of the older residents of Bellefonte, visited here this week to look over the ground with a view to establishing such a plant. While he did not commit himself in a definite way, he stated before departing yesterday for Philadelphia that in all likelihood he would install a factory here.

The chief ingredient in the manufacture of water paint is high grade lime, and it is this fact which prompted Mr. Liveright to figure on establishing a plant in Bellefonte. To some of our local financiers and business men Mr. Liveright stated that no financial assistance would be required or expected, that he is fully able to finance the project himself. His chief reason for wanting to locate here, he added, was the presence of lime in unlimited quantities, thus giving the manufacturer the advantage of an immense saving in transporting that ingredient.

The Liverights were at one time residents of Bellefonte. Morris Liveright is a brother of Max Liveright, who is especially well known in Bellefonte.

Roosevelt Wins Ohio.

In the presidential preference primaries in Ohio on Tuesday Roosevelt won over Taft by from 30,000 to 35,000. Roosevelt gets 30 of the 42 delegates in the State. Governor Harmon carried the State over Governor Wilson, of New Jersey, for the Democratic delegates, by about 35,000.

Following the Ohio result the name of Elihu Root was widely discussed as a compromise candidate for President at the Chicago convention.

Rebuilding Brick Plant.

The Centre Brick & Clay plant, at Orviston, recently damaged by fire, will be rebuilt at once. On the day following the fire the board of directors of the company met and voted to rebuild. A satisfactory adjustment of the fire insurance has since been made. It is proposed to make the new plant absolutely fire proof, the building material being exclusively of steel and iron, concrete and asbestos.

First Penitentiary Money.

William E Crust is the first of the farm owners to receive payment from the State for land to be used as a site for the new penitentiary. A State Treasury warrant covering the price agree upon for the Crust farm was received in Bellefonte on Saturday, last. The Crust tract comprised upward of 200 acres. It is expected that checks will be received from Harrisburg before the end of the week for the several other tracts on the site.

Appendicitis Kills Child.

Wavia, the 9-years-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ross, of Sandy Ridge, died early Monday morning, at the McGirk sanitarium, in Philipsburg. When removed to the sanitarium the child's condition was so serious that an operation was not attempted. The body was removed to Sandy Ridge, where nterment was made yesterday.

Myer Highway Superintendent.

On the recommendation of County Chairman Quigley, W. D. Meyer has been appointed a State highway superintendent for this district. The appointment is credited to Centre County. Mr. Myer recently moved to Bellefonte, being hrst engaged as a State road inspector and later serving for a short time as borough engineer.

Hospital Notes.

Operations—Mrs. Elizabeth Richards, Julian; Miss Mary Bertram, Miles Decker, Bellefonte.

Admitted for treatment—William E. Martin, State College.

Discharged—Ethel Donovan, Axe Mann; Miss Mary Graden, Bellefonte.

26 patients now in the hospital.

Minister Declined Call.

Rev. W. A. H. Streamer, who will this year graduate from the Susquehanna University, has declined the call recently extended him by the Bellefonte Lutheran church.

To Preach Memorial Sermon.

Rev. D. J. Frum, of Pleasant Gap, will preach a memorial day sermon in the church at Pleasant Gap on Sunday morning, next, at 10.30 o'clock.

HARVEY WETZEL KILLED

Former Bellefonte Boy Meets Accidental Death in West Virginia.

Harvey M. Wetzel, a former Bellefonte boy more recently a mining engineer and superintendent of a coal mining company at Anawald, West Virginia, was killed in an accident at the latter place on Monday. The first news to reach here of the accident was a brief telegram announcing his death and stating that the body would be brought to Bellefonte for interment.

Details of how Mr. Wetzel met his death were not learned until the body, accompanied by the family and H. N. Eavenson, of Gary, W. Va., chief engineer and with Mr. Wetzel a part owner of the Central Pocahontas Coal Company, arrived in Bellefonte at noon yesterday. Mr. Wetzel was in the mine at Anawald when he was caught underneath a fall of slate. His back was broken and other injuries inflicted. His death was instantaneous. A mine foreman, who was present at the time, escaped with but a few injuries. Mrs. Wetzel explained that her husband had a strange premonition of danger on the morning he was killed With the mine foreman he sat down at the mine pit for some time, discussing the possible danger of a cave-in. He finally concluded to enter the mine, and a few minutes later he was killed.

Funeral services were held today, at 10 o'clock, from the Reformed church in Bellefonte, Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt officiating. Interment was made in the Union cemetery.

Deceased was aged about 48 years and was a son of the venerable John Wetzel, of Bellefonte, who is now in his 86th year. Harvey Wetzel was a member of the first graduating class of the Bellefonte High School, his classmates being William H. and Harry Keller and Rev. Morris Swartz. Harvey Wetzel later attended Lehigh University, taking a course in mining engineering and graduating with honors. He was married to Miss Emma Himmelright, of Bethlehem, who survives, as do also the following children: Mildred, who last year graduated from the Bellefonte High School; Helen, Howard and Harry. Surviving Mr. Wetzel are also his father and the following brothers and sister: Rev. Frank Wetzel, Stoyestown, Pa.; Clyde and William, Nelson, Nebraska; Lewis, Toledo, Ohio; Samuel, Henry, Charles and Oscar and Mrs. Jared Harper, all of Bellefonte.

FOR CURTIN'S GRAVE

Pennsylvania Reserves Will Send Seventeenth Annual Floral Piece.

In keeping with custom the famous old Pennsylvania Reserves, at Philadelphia, have arranged to send to Bellefonte a beautiful floral piece to be placed on the grave of their old commander, Governor Andrew G. Curtin. The floral piece will be shipped to Gregg Post, No. 95, W. H. Taylor, commander. It will be the seventeenth occasion on which the grave has been so decorated.

It is largely due to the energy of Owen Jones, of the Twentieth ward, in Philadelphia, that this beautiful tribute to the memory of the War Governor is paid each year by the men who comprised his old command. Intensely patriotic and cherishing a deep affection for Governor Curtin, Mr. Jones finds it a pleasure each year to see that the Pennsylvania Reserves send a wreath or some other floral token to Bellefonte, where it is received by Gregg Post and placed on Curtin's grave. Mr. Jones has promised himself that he will attend to this to the end of his life. It is his way of showing his reverence for his old commander and, to our mind, a more beautiful way could not be found.

G. A. R. Memorial Plans.

Gregg Post, No. 95, will as usual take an active part in the observance of Memorial Day. The following General Order has been issued for the occasion:

"The following arrangements for the proper observance of Memorial Day have been made:

"Sunday, May 26—Gregg Post, No. 95, and James Harris Camp, Sons of Veterans, will attend Divine services at the United Brethren church, in Bellefonte, at 10.30 o'clock a. m., Rev. C. W. Winey officiating. Sunday afternoon a squad from Gregg Post will hold memorial services at Myers and Shiloh cemeteries.

"Thursday, May 30—The usual memorial service will be observed. Veterans and participating organizations will form in the public square at 1.30 p. m.; will move to the Union cemetery, and return to the Court House, where Rev. Dr. George E. Hawes will deliver the annual memorial address; at conclusion of the address veterans will be guests of the Elks at their historical home on High Street.

"Sunday, June 2—A detail from Gregg Post will hold memorial services at Zion, Hublersburg and Snydertown. By order of,

EMANUEL NOLL, Adjutant. W. H. TAYLOR, Commander.

PROPOSE $25,000 LOAN FOR PAVING STREETS

Business Men Considering This Method for Getting Money.

BORO. BORROWS LIMIT

Suggested Loan Would Necessitate Special Election—Petition Requesting Brick Paving in High Street Submitted to Council.

A proposition to submit to the people of Bellefonte at a special election a $25,000 loan for street paving is seriously under consideration by well known and influential business men. The plan is being considered as an alternative should the borough Council reject the request that High Street be paved with brick between Water Street and Court House diamond. It is feared in some quarters that Council will reject the request, not because of lack of interest in the proposed improvement but because the borough is already at or dangerously near the borrowing limit.

The request for the paving of High Street was submitted to Council at the Monday night meeting this week It was accorded little encouragement, chiefly on the ground that it was not prepared in legal form. Many of the signers to the petition were not property owners, or owners of property abutting on the street to be paved. An informal discussion brought to the front the fact that some members of Council, at least, take the ground that the borough does not have the money necessary to pay its share of the paving. President Keller stated that if a petition legally prepared and signed by abutting property owners were presented to Council it would receive proper consideration.

After the petition, which was numerously signed, had been read, President Keller inquired what was the pleasure of Council in regard to it, and Mr. Beezer at once spoke up:

"So far as I am concerned Council can dispose of it right now. The petition is signed by a lot of people who are not property owners and we couldn't get anything out of them. Let the property owners furnish the brick and we will brick the street."

Mr. Judge, while not taking an aggressive course, mildly remarked that some way might be found to furnish the money, at least for paving High Street between Water Street and Spring Street. This was about as far as the consideration went, the petition being referred to the Street Committee.

Much of the business considered by Council was of a routine character. Burgess Bower reported that the recently repaired fire engine of the Undine Fire Company had been tested and found in splendid working order. Council temporarily deferred accepting the engine from the factory. Thomas Howley was granted permission to sweep and sprinkle Allegheny Street, between Pike alley and Bishop Street. Mr. Howley desired use of fire plugs in securing water. This was not granted, although he was given the privilege of using the water provided he secured it from other sources. The only course left open to him by this ruling will be to use pavement flush spigots. Council formally went on record as willing to place proper oil on any street in the borough, provided property owners furnish the oil. Residents of Allegheny Street, between Pike alley and Linn Street, desire to use oil on the street. They are willing to furnish the oil and want the borough to put it upon the street. A special oil will be required on the asphaltum paving. Council directed that notes be drawn for $1100 and $2000 to take up notes covering like amounts and which expire June 1st., next. Borough Solicitor Mitchell reported that of outstanding claims for street paving amounting to $1400 all but approximately $250 or $300 had been collected on Monday. Liens were entered on that day against property owners for the unpaid claims.

Was Lincoln Pallbearer.

Simon B. Barr, of Altoona, who had the distinction of having been one of the pall bearers of Abraham Lincoln, died on Saturday morning, after a month's illness. Four weeks ago he began to suffer from a bealing in the head, which affected his heart and caused death. Mr. Barr was the last of the Lincoln pall bearers to die.

The School Board of Juniata borough, will elect a supervising principal during the last week of May. The position pays $1200 per year. Applications should be addressed to P. E. Bishop, Secretary, 525 Fifth Avenue, Juniata, Pa.

HIGH SCHOOL HONORS CAPTURED BY GIRLS

Ruth Elizabeth Kline Ranks First, and Sarah Strohm Shuey Second.

CLASS OF TWENTY-ONE

Interesting Exercises Next Week Will Mark Close of School in Bellefonte—Commencement Address by Dr. J. G. Becht, of Harrisburg.

Of a class of twenty-one graduates at the Bellefonte High School both first and second honors have been captured by girls. First honors have been awarded Miss Ruth Elizabeth Kline. Miss Sarah Strohm Shuey won second honors. The class is composed of nine young ladies and twelve young men.

Appropriate and well rehearsed exercises will next week mark the close of the Bellefonte public schools for the summer. The primary grade schools in the New High School building will have their exercises on Tuesday morning, beginning at 9.45 o'clock. The grades in the Brick building, on Bishop Street, will formally close with exercises on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

The first feature of the week will be the junior declamatory contest, in the New High School building, on Monday evening, May 27th.

Commencement exercises will be held by the graduating class of the High School in the New High School building on Wednesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. In the evening at 8.15 o'clock, at the New High School building, the commencement address will be delivered by J. George Becht, Ph. D., secretary of the State Board of Education. Following will be the presentation of diplomas and awarding of prizes by Dr. M. J. Locke, president of the School Board.

Articles of various kinds made by pupils of the grade schools, of both buildings, will be on exhibition on Tuesday morning on the first floor of the New High School building. There will be an exhibit of work in sewing in the directors' room in the same building.

Teachers and pupils alike have worked faithfully to make next week's exercises at both buildings meet and possibly surpass the high standard of recent years. All indications are that the exercises and exhibits will be far beyond those of former years. The program for the grade school exercises on Tuesday at the New High School building follows:

TUESDAY, 9.45 A. M.

ACADEMY MINSTRELS

Bellefonte School Boys Give Splendid Performances to Big Houses.

Some times, as a usual thing in fact, most persons go to a home talent entertainment fully expecting to be bored but determined to live through it. And some times they are not at all disappointed. The big crowds which witnessed the Academy minstrels on Friday and Saturday nights of last week were anything but bored, for both performances were not only good but far above the average.

Sparkling, catchy music and songs, lots of new and spicy jokes, and just enough side features to keep things keyed up to an interesting notch, served to give the audience on Friday night a good run for the money left at the door. Friday night's program went off so easily and smoothly that a big house for the second evening was a foregone conclusion.

To attempt to enumerate those who acquitted themselves with credit would be to run in the entire list, for every feature was pleasing and in most instances received an encore. That there should be so many good voices among such a limited number of students proved an agreeable surprise to most persons While the audiences on both evenings were more than satisfied, not the least of the many happy features was the noticeable fact that nobody enjoyed themselves more than did the Academy boys on the stage. They not only produced but got a lot of fun out of it.

The Jimtown Quartet, all four members being students from Jamestown, N. Y., made one of but many hits scored during the evening. Dr. O. O. Weston, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., gave an exhibition of fancy Indian club swinging. The "Schnitzell Bank," rendered by the Bellefonte Dramatic Club, got away with one of the best laughs of the evening.

The proceeds of the two performances are for the benefit of the running track, now being built in Hughes field, and which is for the use of all Bellefonte boys.

To Prof. J. R. Hughes, who was behind everything and keeping everything moving, much credit is due for the success of the project.

The total receipts of the two performances was about $350, with expenses of approximately $200, leaving a net balance of something like $150.

The annual reception and dance of the Academy will this year be held in the Armory on Friday evening, May 31, at eight o'clock. There will be no ceremonies at all this year at the main building. All past and present students, all past and present patrons, and all who regard themselves as friends of the Academy are cordially invited to be present. No formal invitations are issued. Christy Smith's orchestra will furnish music, and there will likely be some of the minstrel music rendered by the students.

Next will be a gala athletic week. On Decoration Day afternoon the fine new one-fifth mile running track, which has just been completed on Hughes field, by R. B. Taylor, the contractor, will be dedicated with an inter-class meet by Academy students. Medals will be awarded the winners. The Academy has some fast men and will furnish lively sport for the spectators. Let a good crowd turn out and encourage this worthy enterprise. Time of meet, 2 p. m. Admission, 25c.

Lost $35 in Bills.

John Watson, of 128 North Penn Street, is waiting to hear from the honest person who found $35 in bills on the street or in some store in Bellefonte during the last few days. The money belongs to Mr. Watson and he is hopeful that the finder is honest and merely waiting to learn the name and address of the owner so that the money may be returned. Mr. Watson visited several stores on Wednesday evening of last week, making a few purchases, and after being on the street a short time he returned home. The next day he discovered that he had lost a small roll of bills, amounting to $35. There were three $10 bills and one $5 bill. Mr. Watson is unable to tell just where he lost them. He is an honest, industrious young man and cannot afford to lose the money. If the finder will return the same to him he will greatly appreciate it and give a reward in keeping with his means.

D. L. Somerville Promoted.

D. L. Somerville, son of James L. Somerville, of Winburne, formerly assistant superintendent for the N. Y. C. at Jersey Shore Junction, has gone to Utica, N. Y., where he has been given the position of superintendent of the Mohawk and Malone division of the N Y. C. railroad.

The Crops.

Bradstreet's Report says: While cool, wet weather has retarded crop preparation and planting, its effect upon grain in the ground, particularly wheat and oats, has been favorable. Hence winter and spring wheat and oats crop reports are all better. In Texas and Oklahoma winter wheat looks finely and is approaching maturity. In Nebraska the wheat crop outlook is fine. In Kansas and in states east of the river some fields that were despaired of earlier are looking well. Ohio wheat crop reports are, however, very poor.

Spring-wheat seeding is practically finished in the northwest and in Canada. In northwest North Dakota, however, seeding has been delayed by rains, and a 10 per cent. decrease is indicated from that section. In Canada a gain of 25 per cent. in spring-wheat area is indicated.

It has been rather too wet and cool for corn plowing and planting, but there is still time to put in a full area if sunshine comes. In the east three days of rain has still further delayed farm operations.

Only good reports come from that part of the oats crop that has been seeded. Western planting is finished, but eastern seeding is yet to be done in large areas.

The one crop that is apparently without flaw as regards con lition and outlook is hay, which promises well from every section reporting. Pasture lands have improved, though more sunshine would be beneficial.

The weather has improved in parts of the south, notably the lower Mississippi valley, Alabama and parts of the south Atlantic seaboard. In Alabama spring terms of courts have been suspended to enable farmers to get in their crop. The situation in Texas is good, and in the lower Mississippi it is more hopeful, but there seems no reason to expect a full acreage in cotton in the south as a whole.

SOCIALISTS NAME DEBS

Is Again Chosen Candidate for President—Seidel His Running Mate.

Eugene Victor Debs, of Terre Haute, Ind., was nominated last Friday as a candidate for the presidency of the United States by the national socialists convention at Indianapolis, Ind. Emil Seidel, former mayor of Milwaukee, was named for the vice presidential nomination.

Mr. Debs was not in the hall when the result of the ballot was announced, but Mr. Seidel in a few words thanked the delegates and promised that he would make the campaign "as lively as the capitalist parties had ever seen."

Mr. Debs was opposed for the presidential nomination by Mr. Seidel and Charles Edward Russell, of New York. After the result of the first ballot which was Debs 165; Seidel 56, and Russell 54, had been given out, Mr. Seidel moved that the nomination be made unanimous and it was seconded by Mr. Russell.

Many candidates, including Kate Richards O'Hara, of St. Louis, and Anna Agnes Mahley, of Seattle, Wash., were named for the second place, but only three, Mr. Seidel, John W. Slayton, Pennsylvania, and Dan Hogan, Arkansas, remained to be voted upon. Mr. Seidel, on the first ballot received 159 votes; Hogan 73 and Slayton 24. Mr. Hogan's motion to make Mr. Seidel's nomination unanimous was seconded by Mr. Slayton.

Turning the Tables on an Editor.

Magazines ordinarily return manuscripts with polite printed slips. Below is reproduced a good "take-off" on one of these slips. It was sent by an author with his manuscript when he despatched it to The American Magazine.

The American Magazine has some sense of humor, and in its June number publishes the letter. The man who wrote the letter and sent it with his manuscripts is Charles F. Lummis, Public Librarian in Los Angeles, California:

"Do you know good verse when you see it?

"The author regrets that this Ms. is not compulsory. It is merely an opportunity.

"You publish so much literature that it is quite impossible for him to criticize it personally and show you how much better this is. Except at full rates—and worth the money.

"The obvious merit of this contribution does not necessarily imply any lack of intelligence in the editors who reject it. Quite the contrary. They have to maintain their average. Nothing is more experimental than variety.

"Homing envelope, with wings prepaid, with this, just as though it were an ordinary Ms."

Poor Districts.

Last year there were in Pennsylvania 24 districts, represented by 149 schools in which the minimum school term of 7 months could not be maintained by levying the maximum account of tax under the old law. Many of these schools are in mountainous regions where there are few people and where the value of property is very low. The State Board of Education will ask the next Legislature to give consideration to the question of providing proper educational facilities for these unfortunately situated districts.

STATE TRACK WINNERS

Victors Over Indians at Meet at Harrisburg on Saturday.

Pennsylvania State College won the fifth state intercollegiate athletic meet at Harrisburg last Saturday with ease, having 22½ more points than the Carlisle Indian School team, its nearest competitor. The Indians were without Thorpe, their crack runner, who was in New York in the preliminaries for the Olympic games, but put up a strong fight in several events.

The team scores were:

Pennsylvania State, 52½; Carlisle, 29; Swarthmore, 22; Gettysburg, 12; Washington and Jefferson, 10½; Lafayette, 10; University of Pittsburg, 10, and Dickinson 8. The summary of the events include the following State winners:

One mile run—Won by Lamb, Penn State; second Watts, Penn State. Time, 4 minutes 37 3-5 seconds.

Half mile run—Won by Leyden, Penn State; third, Marshall, Penn State. Time, 2 minutes 2-25 seconds.

Two-mile run—Won by Keiser, Penn State; second, Watts, Penn State; third, Savery, Penn State. Time, 10 minutes 7 3-5 seconds.

120-yard hurdle—Won by Crumrine, Washington and Jefferson; second, Pier, Penn State. Time, 16 4-5 seconds.

220-yard hurdles—Won by Goesback, Carlisle; second, Crumbine, Washington and Jefferson; third, Pier, Penn State. Time, 27 1-5 seconds.

Pole vault—Won by Mayle, Penn State; second, Hopkins, Penn State; third, Coonsal, Carlisle; fourth, Hayes, Penn State. Height, 11 feet.

Broad jump—Won by Gillan, Penn State. 21 feet 2¼ inches.

High jump—Won by Elliott, Penn State. Height, 5 feet 7½ inches.

Throwing 16-pound hammer—Won by Lamb, Penn State. Distance, 145 feet 4½ inches. This is 18 feet better than the record held by W. W. Zeig, University of Pittsburg.

Shot put—Won by Galvin, University of Pittsburg; second, Lamb, Penn State. Distance, 39 feet 6 inches.

Discus throw—Won by Benson, Lafayette; second, Lamb, Penn State. Distance, 109 feet 8 inches.

Cut Back Frozen Peach Trees.

One of the most experienced orchardists and nurserymen in Pennsylvania wrote to Prof. H. A. Surface, of Harrisburg, asking what should be done with peach trees of which he sent a sample of wood. They were so badly frozen that they were brown when freshly cut. Thousands of peach growers this year need the information which was given, and which was as follows:

"The wood is too badly frozen to recover unless it is cut back well. I should cut at least two-thirds of the top out of such a tree, but I should not cut it so that it is cut to mere stubs without buds. I mean to say, that I would leave branches with their full bud length, rather than dehorning all of them to stubs. Leave some leaf buds on your trees to start the sap going. When you cut out a tall branch make the cut just above a living side branch upon which good strong leaf buds are to be found.

"The strongest leaf buds of your peach tree will start and grow, just as they would develop if the twigs were cut off and placed in water, but they are liable to die during the summer, because the cambium layer of the twigs, which is the vital means of connection between bud and root, is killed by this freezing. The important point to be in mind in pruning a frozen tree is, that it will not stand topping back to stubs as severely as in pruning for bad scale infestation.

"As a fruit grower, you will be interested in knowing that there may possibly be a two per cent. peach crop this year in this region, but I think not more than that."

Saved by a Cigar.

M. Guizot, the well known French historian, while out walking in one of the public gardens of Paris noticed that he was being followed by a disreputable looking and badly dressed individual. M. Guizot was puzzled by the man's behavior, but instead of showing alarm he calmly sat down when he arrived at his favorite seat. The ruffian, without hesitation, came and sat down beside him and gave the historian so fierce a look as to have disconcerted a less timid man. But with a delightful nonchalance M. Guizot took out his cigar case, abstracted a cigar and slowly lit it. The effect of this action upon his companion was remarkable. With a start and a scowl the man suddenly rose and, muttering to himself, "The man I want to kill never smokes," walked rapidly away. A week or so later the historian read in the newspapers that this same individual had been arrested for a violent attack upon a well known public official who bore a strong likeness to M. Guizot himself. The famous writer went home and smoked a big cigar in honor of his narrow escape.

Anecdote of Gounod.

Gounod was at one moment within an ace of taking holy orders, but on reflection he thought that the life of a priest would not suit him. He none the less remained a firm and devout Catholic and adored religious music. On this point a typical anecdote is told of him. It occurred during the rehearsal of his "Drames Sacres" at the Vaudeville theater. The manager called on him one morning and asked permission to make a suggestion. "I think, mon cher maitre," he said, "that there is something wanting in your sacre. For example, do you not think that the Barabbas incident might be improved by a little more orchestral effect?" Gounod, without replying, hid his head in his hands and after two or three minutes of meditation suddenly exclaimed: "No; decidedly no. Such a blackguard as that does not deserve more music."—London Graphic.

Reassuring "Miss Blake."

As they boarded the train they had every look of being a bridal couple. The young man carefully escorted the young woman to a seat, while the interested passengers smiled indulgently. Then, extending his hand to the supposed bride, he said in a very loud voice, "Well, Miss Blake, the train is about to pull out; I wish you a very pleasant journey," and, doffing his soft hat, he hurried off the train. The passengers looked disappointed.

But the young woman seemed nervous. By and by she called the porter and in a whisper gave him some mysterious errand. He came back in a moment and said in a voice audible to every one:

"Yo're all right, ma'am. He's in de smokin' compartment."

Everybody smiled, and the bride blushed prettily.—Youth's Companion.

Sothern and Laura Keene.

The elder Sothern had a great reputation as a practical joker, and to quote his son's own words: "His nerve staggered people at times. I remember that in Baltimore he was once joined by that clever actress Laura Keene. Laura Keene was very hot tempered. On one occasion something went wrong, and she called my father to her dressing room and began to give him a terrific tongue lashing, in the midst of which he suddenly turned out the gas. 'How dare you!' shrieked the fascinating Laura. 'I can't bear to see a pretty woman in a temper,' said my father as he calmly lit the gas again."

Streets of London.

What is the acme of discomfort to which a pedestrian can be subject in London? In a morning walk this writer encountered in close proximity the following nuisances and dangers: The delivery of coal through a coal hole in the pavement. Next door beer was being lowered by an almost unseen rope into a yawning gulf—the public house cellars. The dustman was collecting at the next house, and close by the asphalt pavement was being repaired and turned the walker into the road, where he was splashed by the passing motorbus.—London Chronicle.

Knew What He Could Do.

The lawyer of the convicted pickpocket took the fine imposed upon his client very much to heart.

"Twenty-five dollars!" he expostulated. "Your honor, where is this poor unfortunate man to get $25?"

His honor did not know, or if he did he refrained from saying so, but the prisoner was less discreet.

"Just let me out of here for ten or fifteen minutes," he said, "and I'll show you."—New York Sun.

The Gibraltar of the East.

Aden, at the entrance to the Red sea, is a city with a remarkable history and is known as the "Gibraltar of the east." The Bolognese traveler, Ludovico di Varthema, many centuries ago declared it to be "the strongest city that was ever seen on level ground," while Albuquerque, the great Portuguese pioneer in Asia, stated that it was one of the four places that were essential to those holding dominion in the orient, the other three being Ormuz, Diu and Goa. But the Portuguese held Aden only from 1547 to 1551. According to vague tradition, the place was once occupied by the Romans. One of the earlier voyages of the East India company was to Aden in 1609. In 1802 a treaty was made between Britain and the sultan of Aden. In 1839 his successor was forced to sell his territory to the British as a punishment for an attack on some shipwrecked British sailors, and eleven years later Aden was made a free port. The old town was built on the crater of an extinct volcano.—London Globe.

Sneezing as an Omen.

A sneeze in the days of old Greece was a matter of great concern and import. There was then a god of sneezing, and great undertakings would even be abandoned if a man sneezed at an inappropriate moment, the act being looked upon as the oracle of the god. A sneeze between midnight and noon was looked upon as a fortunate sign, but between noon and midnight it betokened great misfortune. To sneeze to your right was lucky, to the left unlucky. Two or four sneezes were lucky, one or three very unlucky, and any undertaking in hand should, if possible, be abandoned. More than four sneezes did not count. There is a saying in many parts of England today, "Once a wish, twice a kiss, three times a letter, four times something better." If people sneezed together it was a good sign, particularly if they happened to be discussing business.

One of Bismarck's Roars.

On one occasion at luncheon in Berlin General Sir E. Hamley was sitting close to Bismarck, with the old Emperor William not far off. Bismarck, talking rather loudly, described the old monarch as being generous, but very forgetful. Hamley got nervous, as he thought the emperor would hear. "For instance," continued Bismarck, "I pleased him the other day, and he asked me what he could do for me. I said, 'Give me a dozen of that Tokay you have in your cellars,' and he said he would. But," added Bismarck, raising his voice still higher, "he hasn't done it." Here Hamley hastily broke in, "I beg your pardon, but I am really afraid the emperor will hear you." "I want him to hear me!" roared Bismarck. "That's just what I want." And a smile broke over the face of his imperial master.—"Fifty Years of Fleet Street."

The Traveler's Test.

The eminent traveler James Bruce was highly touchy whenever his veracity was called into question. It happened that when dining out one day at a friend's house one of the guests observed that it was impossible that the natives of Abyssinia could eat raw meat. Without making any reply Bruce forthwith left the table and before long returned from the kitchen with a piece of raw beefsteak, peppered and salted in the Abyssinian fashion. Placing this in front of the guest who had doubted his word, he said, "Sir, you will eat that or fight me!" The guest preferred the former alternative. Thereupon Bruce calmly observed, "Now, sir, you will never say again that it is impossible."

Chaucer's Face In a Stone.

In the geological branch of the British museum the visitor is shown a wonderful specimen of natural imitation in a small "ribbon jasper." This stone, the material of which is not unlike that of other banded agates, has upon its surface a perfect miniature portrait of the poet Chaucer. Every detail is startlingly correct. There are the white face, the pouting lips, the broad, low forehead and even the whites of the slightly upturned eyes. The attendants say that it is utterly impossible to convince even some of the educated visitors that it is not an artificial production.

Stumped.

"I want you to introduce me for membership at the Union club, old man," more than insinuated one fellow to our acquaintance.

"I'd like to," answered the other, "but they're awfully particular, you know."

"That's your flattering way of putting it," responded the first, "but I know better. Ain't you a member?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Just as an experiment, see how far you can walk in five minutes. It will convince you that a lot of your hurrying is needless.

Many of us let slip a thousand opportunities by waiting for inspiration, forgetting that idleness is not inspiring. "Inspiration comes to him who works."

Don't be afraid to give compliments. Overdelicacy in this respect is a social handicap and a cause of much needless lack of popularity, with consequent depression and timidity.

If you are in the habit of looking at your watch every few minutes, to see what speed you are making, better discard the watch. You will save ever so much strain, and actually suffer no loss of time.

It is wise for sensitive natures to expose themselves to tragical plays and harrowing novels? They pay for the experience by suffering a ghastly nervous exhaustion out of all proportion to the temporary thrill.

Are you one of the people who hop up nervously when the train is nearing the station, and stand until it stops? You think you are saving a lot of time, whereas in reality a car empties itself in three quarters of a minute.

You have heard of "the total depravity of inanimate objects." They are not depraved. We blame them for our own folly—as when we pile dishes in reckless heaps that are doomed to tip over, or pour hot sauce into cut glass, or go into a dark room without trying to remember where the furniture is.

Why are people so aware of their sensitiveness to the color of furniture and wall-paper, and so blind to the effect of the color of artificial light on the feelings. Really, a mellow light and an agreeable lampshade go far toward making the evening restful and cheerful and cozy. Crude illumination is irritating.

The quickest way to cure "blues" is to identify them. If you look back a little and discover that your woe has no reasonable cause, and that you "just feel like feeling so," you know that the condition is physical. That knowledge puts you on the road to recovery, for the physical condition begins to improve as soon as you find there is nothing worse the matter.—Woman's Home Companion.

Ban Stays on Dancing.

The old-time rule of the Methodist Episcopal Church, forbidding its members to dance, attend theaters or play games of chance, stands unchanged. The Methodist general conference, in session at Minneapolis, Minn., last Saturday reached this decision by a vote which stood:

Against a change, 446; for a change, 369.

The vote was taken after two days of debate in the general conference, which was preceded by a two days' debate in the committee on the state of the church. The present rule of specifications prohibiting the amusements indicated was introduced into the law of the church in 1872, and last Saturday's action is only one in a series of attempts which have been made at almost every succeeding quadrennial general conference to eliminate the specification of particulars and return to the rule as formulated by John Wesley and originally inserted in the church discipline forbidding "the taking of such diversions as cannot be taken in the name of the Lord Jesus."

Cousin Charlie

He Played an Audacious Game, but Won In the End

By MARY PRICE BURNHAM

"My dear Cousin Sue," wrote Miss Auchincloss, cousin by marriage, "we are now settled in our new place at Waverly and claim your long promised visit. We are all anxious to meet you, having heard a great deal about you from different members of your side of the family. Charlie will call for you tomorrow afternoon after luncheon with the auto and bring you out. The distance is only twenty-five miles, and an hour will be quite sufficient for the journey."

"Well," mused Miss Auchincloss, "I dare say they will all be very kind to me, Delia having married my cousin, but since I have never seen any of them, not even the connecting link Charlie, I suppose I shall not feel very much at home among them. However, I shall get acquainted with him on the ride and that will be a help with the others."

The next day at the appointed time Miss Auchincloss was ready for the journey with a suit case standing in the hall. Going to the window she saw a young man just pulling up to the curb in a beautiful new automobile, painted fawn color. A man on the sidewalk advanced and the two talked together, the autoist sitting in his seat. Then the autoist alighted and the two men walked away, leaving the machine standing where it had been stopped.

It occurred to Miss Auchincloss that she would rather wait for her cousin's return in the auto. He had evidently met some one he knew and they had gone off to do something, she didn't know what. When he returned she would be ready for him. She was much pleased with his appearance and this had taken away a good deal of her repugnance at visiting persons whom she had never seen. So carrying her suit case with her she put it in the auto, then got in herself on the seat beside the steering wheel.

She sat there ten minutes, when the autoist returned. He looked at Miss Auchincloss somewhat surprised as he approached, and when he reached the auto, hat in hand, there was an inquiring expression on his face.

"I'm your Cousin Sue Auchincloss. I received Cousin Delia's letter saying that you would call for me this afternoon to take me out to Waverly. I saw you drive up to the door and walk away with your friend. I thought I'd be ready for you on your return."

A meeting between two persons who have never met before is apt to be a little stiff, and for a few moments the young man showed embarrassment; then he muttered a few incoherent nothings, took his seat, attached the power, and the two sped away. The formality of a first meeting soon disappeared. Cousin Charlie asked a great many questions about his relatives, the Auchinclosses, and Cousin Sue asked a great many about his branch of the family, the Chamberlins. He was especially pressing in his queries, surprising Miss Auchincloss by his want of knowledge of his kin on her side of the house. When each had been satisfied in this matter they fell to general conversation and got on famously. Miss Auchincloss was delighted with Cousin Charlie, and Mr. Chamberlin was delighted with Cousin Sue.

When an hour had passed Miss Auchincloss asked if they were not near Mr. Chamberlin's home, his wife having written that the distance could be covered within that time. Mr. Chamberlin smiled and said he had no idea of taking so short a ride and had chosen a far longer route. Coming to a roadhouse, he said he would telephone that they would not arrive as soon as expected and, alighting, went inside for the purpose. He was gone some time and when he returned explained the length of his absence from the fact that the wire was busy and he was obliged to wait.

It was three hours after the starting that the auto pulled up in the grounds of a handsome place, and several young women came out on the porch to receive the guest. One of them, whom Cousin Charlie called Delia, advanced, gave Miss Auchincloss a kiss, and the rest followed suit. A small boy of ten who announced himself as Cousin Frank insisted on carrying Cousin Sue's suit case, and the party went into the house. They were all young and seemed very well pleased at the meeting. The guest was shown to her chamber, where she made a toilet for dinner, putting on the one dressy costume she had brought with her.

"Dear me," she said to herself when left alone, "I didn't know that Charlie Chamberlin was so well off as to live in this style. I wonder if the funds don't belong to his wife."

The dinner went off pleasantly though it seemed to Miss Auchincloss that there was an uneasiness in her cousins, and as time wore on Charlie though evidently much pleased at having his cousin with him, appeared especially distracted. Little Frank seemed inclined to do a good deal of chattering despite efforts made to muzzle him. He kept calling those at the table by their wrong names and was constantly saying things to make the occupants of the house uneasy. Finally just at the conclusion of the dinner he addressed Cousin Delia thus:

"I say, Mollie, why don't you get married?"

There was a laugh, which on the part of the hosts was mingled with a good deal of constraint. Cousin Charlie looked frightened, and Cousin Delia turned red in the face. No reference was made to the boy's having called Delia Mollie, and in time the equanimity of the party returned. After dinner it was still day, for it was the season when the twilights were long, and all went on to the veranda.

"Charlie," said Delia, "you had better show Cousin Sue the grounds before it is dark."

"Oh, I wouldn't think of separating a newly married couple. Come with us Cousin Delia," said Miss Auchincloss.

Several of the party turned their backs at this reply, and it looked to the guest that it was for a reason. There was something going on underneath this cousinly welcome that mystified Miss Auchincloss. Cousin Delia excused herself on the ground that she was obliged to get a letter written to be sent out before the mail closed. It did not seem to Miss Auchincloss that there was anything husbandly and wifely between her and Charlie. They had been married but a short time, and even between couples who have lived together for years there is a certain something that marks them as belonging to each other. Nevertheless while Miss Auchincloss noticed the absence of this something it did not occur to her that the couple were anything but man and wife.

"Cousin Delia," she said to Charlie as they strolled away together, "looks enough like you to be your sister."

"W-h-a-t!"

"I have never seen a married couple resemble each other as you two do."

"Y-e-s; several persons have spoken of that. I don't see it at all," replied Charlie, then turned the subject.

He led Miss Auchincloss about the grounds which covered a dozen acres attractively laid out, a rivulet running through it spanned by rustic bridges and here and there broadened into a fish or a duck pond. As they strolled along together Charlie seemed to lose that embarassment which had troubled him, but he surprised Miss Auchincloss by certain glances and words that were altogether too flirtatious to come from a married man, especially one who had been recently wedded. Miss Auchincloss suggested that, the sun having set, the air was becoming a trifle chilly and she thought she would return to the house. They found the auto standing before the door.

"Why, you're not going out again in your machine tonight, Cousin Charlie?" remarked Miss Auchincloss.

"I thought we would have another ride," was the reply. "The moon is coming up, and it is full tonight."

"But"—

"But what?"

"Why, don't you think you'd better take Cousin Delia out with you?"

"Oh, she doesn't like to ride in an automobile; she's afraid."

They went into the house, and Charlie announced his intention to take his cousin for a moonlight ride. This did not surprise the others, and when Miss Auchincloss offered to give place to Delia the latter repressed a smile and said that her moonlight rides with Charlie were a thing of the past.

So the cousins got into the auto together and started forth. They had not been out long before it was evident that Cousin Charlie was trying to get something out. He made several attempts, all of which were failures, when Miss Auchincloss said:

"There is something about this visit of mine that I can't understand, a secret among you all, to which I have not been admitted. I wish you would tell me what it is."

Cousin Charlie made another effort and was soon launched upon an explanation mingled with frequent excuses and apologies. He told her that when he saw her in his auto he knew at once that she had made a mistake. He was not her Cousin Charlie at all. The temptation to impersonate that gentleman and take her for a drive was too strong for him. Then it occurred to him to take her home with him for dinner. He had prepared the family for the event by telephone and asked one of his sisters to impersonate his wife. They had protested against the plan at first, but finally consented. The matter would have gone off more smoothly had it not been for Frank, who kept them in constant terror lest he should let out the plot.

It took Mr. Chamberlin the greater part of the ride to smooth Miss Auchincloss' ruffled feelings, but gradually it came over her that the affair was a very good joke, and she admitted that she had made some very pleasant acquaintances. She asked Cousin Charlie in what direction he was driving, and he said that he was taking her to her real cousin's. He had telephoned them that her arrival would be delayed. She asked when her suit case would be sent to her, and he told her that it was stowed away in the rear of the auto.

It had been very easy for the young man to play the game; indeed, Miss Auchincloss had walked into it of her own accord. It was another matter to smooth her ruffled feelings. Nevertheless by dint of penitence and persuasion he finally succeeded.

And so ended the first chapter in a love story which was quite awhile in developing. Miss Auchincloss was prevailed upon to visit again those who had entertained her, and they all became very intimate. Cousin Charlie or Fred Warrington, took her on many an auto ride and one moonlight night in the autumn secured her promise to be his wife.

The Long Eared Bat.

The long eared bat puts itself to bed in wraps not only of its own wings, but supplemented by the folding of its own enormous ears. This little British mammal, the body of which is only two inches long from the tip of the nose to the base of the tail, has the largest ears, in proportion to its size, of any animal in the world. They are an inch and a half long and three-quarters of an inch broad, and when their owner proposes to go to sleep it bends them outward and then backward, folding them down on either side of its head and shoulders before bringing up the wings to cover its sides. When waking up it is quite a business for the little bat to get its tall ears straightened out and into position again. They remain for some time at "half cock" and then are gradually set up and erected to serve the animal while awake.—London Nature.

Wifely Attention.

Mr. and Mrs. Compton had gone out on the platform to take the air. Mrs. Compton returned to the car first and sat down squarely in what she thought was her husband's chair. That she had made a mistake was speedily proved by the irate voice of the man who had walked along the aisle behind her.

"Madam," he said, "you are sitting on my hat!"

Mrs. Compton rose and took from the seat a crushed and crumpled object.

"Oh," she said breathlessly as she gazed at the forlorn object, "I'm very sorry! You see, I thought all the time it was my husband's—I mean"—

But what she really meant she never fully explained, for the outraged owner of the hat seized it and stalked away in high dudgeon.—Youth's Companion.

Well Informed.

The Londoner wished to be agreeable to his American acquaintance.

"Have you telephones in America?" he inquired.

"They were invented here."

"Oh—ah—indeed! And have you the telegraph?"

"Its inventor was an American."

"Really?" The Londoner seemed put out somehow, but presently he recovered his equanimity and blandly remarked:

"Ah, but anyhow you have to give England credit for inventing the Edison light!"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

A Solemn Dance.

They have a singular kind of dance conducted on the greens of country villages in Russia. The dancers stand apart, a knot of young men here, a knot of maidens there, each sex by itself and silent as a crowd of mutes. A piper breaks into a tune; a youth pulls off his cap and challenges his girl with a wave and bow. If the girl is willing, she waves her handkerchief in token of assent. The youth advances, takes a corner of the handkerchief in his hand and leads his lassie round and round. No word is spoken and no laugh is heard. Stiff with cords and rich with braids, the girl moves heavily by herself, going round and round and never allowing her partner to touch her hand. The pipe goes droning on for hours in the same sad key and measure, and the prize of merit in this "circling," as the dance is called, is given by spectators to the lassie who in all that summer revelry has never spoken and never smiled.

MR. MILLER AND THE LAW.

County Treasurer Miller recently made a mistake when he ignored the law governing the advertising of unseated land sales. Last week he fulfilled our expectations by rushing into a public defense of his mistake. We pity him in his apparent mental distress, but the situation is entirely one of his own making.

When Mr. Miller entered upon his duties as County Treasurer he was sworn to observe and execute the laws as he found them. When he came to advertising his unseated land sales he found that the law required that he advertise such sales in ALL the newspapers in Centre County. He had but one duty before him and that was to execute the law as he found it. Instead of doing this he placed the advertising in a few newspapers of his own selection.

When "The Republican" called attention to this fact Mr. Miller hurried into the public prints with a defense. Two of his newspaper champions discreetly published his statement in inside pages Unless we are very much mistaken it is the honest judgment of the editors of these two Democratic newspapers that Mr. Miller clearly had violated the law. It is quite significant that neither of these newspapers has contended that Mr. Miller did not do so. They could not without endeavoring to say that the law does not mean what it says.

Had Mr. Miller frankly stated in his defense that he had done the very best he knew how one might hold out some excuse for his apparent lack of appreciation of the law. Instead of a straightforward, manly statement Mr. Miller resorts to a mathematical illustration which aims to deceive. He presents a hypothetical case to show what the advertising would cost had he placed it in all the newspapers in the county at a fixed rate per line. It is here that Mr. Miller clumsily undertakes to deceive. Mr. Miller knows that this advertising is placed at a fixed charge per tract, and not by the line, which fact topples over his entire statement. The proof that he knows this is given in the advertising which he himself placed and which is at present appearing in a few favored newspapers. This very advertising in question was placed by Mr. Miller at a fixed charge per tract, and not by the line. The most charitable view we can form of this part of his statement is that some hand other than his prepared it and that he lacked the wit or the desire, or both, to correct it.

We have no criticism of Mr. Miller, the individual, but we wish to remind him that he is an officer of the county and that his acts as such are properly subject to public scrutiny. We would also remind him that the surest way for him to guard against criticism of his official acts is to execute the laws as he finds them and not twist them to suit his personal wishes. Any public official who reaches the point where he concludes that a law is obsolete when it seems to him to be unreasonable is, at best, on dangerous ground.

The Legislature of Pennsylvania, and not County Treasurer Miller, has power to change the laws of this State.

Some candidates for President are running, and some are just walking.

OHIO.

Ohio on Tuesday registered its preference as between Taft and Roosevelt, and the verdict was for Roosevelt. That such a decisive vote should be rendered against the President in his home State come as a surprise to the friends and supporters of the President. It but typifies the strong, popular fancy of the American people, regardless of parties or State lines, for the aggressive Roosevelt, the man who leaped into fame with the Rough Riders and who has never permitted fame to get away from him.

The result in Ohio has a deeper sign ficance than the mere addition to or substraction of a few votes in the Roosevelt column. It signifies that the popular wave, whether sound in policy or not, is undoubtedly toward Roosevelt. The impression the Ohio result will create upon other States still to vote is not difficult to imagine. Roosevelt is the more aggressive, forceful campaigner than Taft, and if he is able to arouse and swing the States yet to vote with anything like the same success he achieved in Ohio there will be nothing to it at Chicago.

If it is Bryan's scheme to keep Wilson and Clark just running neck and neck, with Harmon and Underwood lost somewhere in the woods, and all to create a psychological moment in the Baltimore convention well, William J. is succeeding right smart in what he started out to do.

COAL STRIKE OFF

Anthracite Miners Sign Agreement Covering Four Years.

The strike among the miners in the anthracite region was settled last week and on Monday the men signed an agreement with the operators which insures peace for the next four years. With the signing of the agreement 170,000 miners will be back at work before the end of the week.

According to the new agreement the miners will receive a ten per cent. wage increase and will be given partial recognition of the union. Besides these concessions they were also assured of an equitable distribution of mine cars as set forth in the award of the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission and the decisions of the Conciliation Board. It is further stipulated in the agreement that at each mine there shall be a grievance committee consisting of not more than three employes to take up with the proper officials of the company all complaints referred to them by the mine workers.

Big Electrical Convention.

The National Electric Light Association will hold its thirty-fifth annual convention in Seattle, June 10th to 14th. This is one of the most important electrical associations in the world, being composed of the foremost operating companies in the land—Pennsylvania alone having a membership of one hundred companies. The associate membership is composed of the employes of the various operating and manufacturing companies, among whom will be found the brains of the electrical world, the men individually responsible for the growth of the industry, which in thirty-five years has grown from nothing to a business requiring an investment of almost $1,000,000,000 for the production of electric light, heat and power alone.

The delegates will travel on special trains "de luxe," leaving different points in the east on different dates and visiting various points of interest throughout the United States and Canada, the return trip being arranged to allow each traveler to make his own selection of route. Taking it all in all, the electrical experts are planning to mix in a good measure of pleasure with their annual business meeting.

Charming Western Beauties.

A score or more lady expert riders and lady sharpshooters are with the grea Prairie Lillie and Nebraska Bill's Wild West exhibition which is to appear in Bellefonte, next Tuesday, May 28. Never before has there been offered to the American amusement loving public such an exhibition of graceful activity, dare-devil riding, accurate shooting, such a beautiful, bewildering and bewitching display of feminine charms as is presented by these beauties of the far west.

Young Man in Shooting Fray.

Arthur Rowles, of Woodland, was last week arrested and lodged in the Clearfield jail following an altercation with his brother, Chauncey. During the mixup there several shots fired. The only damage done was that by a stray bullet, which struck a side-walk and glancing off lodged in the leg of Thomas Winsor. Before being arrested Rowles turned a revolver on Constable W. H. Barger. Fortunately the revolver failed to go off.

Mrs. John Barnes Dead.

Mrs. John Barnes, relict of the late John Barnes, Sr., died on Friday of last week at her home in Philipsburg. She was 67 years old.

IN GOOD HANDS

Annie Derstine, of Bellefonte, at the Crittenden Home.

The Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin on Monday published the following: Miss Annie Derstine, of Bellefonte, was taken in custody by Captain of Detectives W. P. Powers on Sunday and later she was taken to the Florence Crittenden home by Chief of Police Harder. There is no particular charge against the girl only her age warranted that she be checked in the career she seemed to be following. The police were notified that Miss Derstine was near the Washington school building talking with a number of young men, but her neat appearance allowed her to pass the notice of the police and she was not taken in until after she appeared at a home in this city and asked for admittance. She was taken in and the lady of the house seeing her age notified the police.

The chief of police of Bellefonte was notified by Chief Harder to look up her parents and have them come to this city and get her, but the word came back that the parents had refused to come after her and that the police should do as they pleased with her. Chief Harder notified Mrs. Pennel, at the Crittenden home, and she was at once welcomed into the home.

Miss Derstine is but seventeen years of age. For some time she has been in Lock Haven and Renovo and then a few days ago she came to this city, but her career here has been cut rather short. She is dressed neatly and presents a good appearance when on the street. On the way to the home she told Chief Harder that her home environment was not what it should be and this was the cause of her going astray.

Mrs. Jacob S. Herman Dead.

Following an illness of some months, Mrs. Jacob S. Herman died at her late home at Lemont on Monday morning at 2 o'clock. She had rapidly been failing for some time and while her death was not wholly unexpected she was so well known and universally admired that her passing away occasioned the deepest sorrow among a wide circle of friends. Her husband is one of the best known men in Centre County. Deceased was a daughter of John and Clara Miller, early settlers of Shingletown, where she was born 64 years ago. She was twice married, her first husband being William Miller, who died about 30 years ago. In 1888 she married Jacob S. Herman and ever since that time made her home at Lemont. Surviving are her husband, one son, Wade, of her second marriage, also five step-daughters as well as three daughters of her first husband. She is also survived by these brothers and sisters: David, John and George Miller, of Pine Grove Mills, and Phoebe and Mary, at the old home at Shingletown. She was an active, earnest worker in the Reformed church, and by her many admirable qualities she had surrounded herself with a legion of loyal, affectionate friends. By all who knew her she was loved and esteemed and the open-hearted hospitality of her home may be testified to by many who have been welcome visitors in years gone by. Funeral services were held yesterday, at 10 o'clock, Rev. S. C. Stover, of Boalsburg, officiating.

Mrs. Caroline M. Stamm Dead.

Mrs. Caroline M. Stamm, wife of C. J. Stamm, died at the family residence, 608 First avenue, Altoona, of a complication of diseases, on Wednesday, May 14th. She was a daughter of Adam and Sarah Stover, (deceased) and was born April 1, 1850, at the Branch, Centre county. She is survived by her husband and the following children: C. F. Stamm, B. E. Stamm, Mrs. T. C. Forshey, Mrs. J. E. Johnston, and Mrs. J. W. Granby, all of Altoona; J. A. Stamm, of Boalsburg, Mary, William, Margaret, Catherine and Anna at home. She is also survived by the following sisters: Mrs. I. J. Kramer, of Iowa; Mrs. Griff Lytle, of Downs, Kansas; Mrs. J. E. Shires, of Roaring Spring; Mrs. M. L. Wolf and Mrs. G. M. Meek, of Altoona.

She was a faithful and devoted member of Trinity Reformed church. In her daily life she cultivated those noble traits which made her a good mother to her large family, and a noble friend to all who knew her. Unusually large hearted her faith and her hope made her one of God's noble women.

The funeral services were held at the late residence Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment in Rose Hill cemetary.

Mrs. Adam Fetzer Dead.

Mrs. Adam Fetzer, a well known resident of Centre County, died suddenly on Tuesday morning at her late home nearby the Advent church. She was in apparently good health on Monday night, but she complained of being unable to sleep. While seated on the front porch of her home she suddenly expired. Funeral services today, at 10 o'clock, interment in the Advent cemetery. Mrs. Fetzer was aged about 78 years. She was an estimable woman and her death is sincerely mourned by all who knew her. Surviving are the following children: Ervella and Gertrude, Harry, Elmer, Frank and Theodore.

This cold, rainy weather does not agree with the men of this community; it promotes loafing, a dangerous disease.

May 15th., 1884, it rained, hailed and thundered with lightning and snowed all in one day. But May 17, 1912, it rained and a few snow flakes fell.

It seems an easy matter for it to rain these days, but just wait three months from now and we may be glad to get half of the rain which we get at present.

Mrs. John Gingery Dead.

Death early Tuesday morning terminated the life of a good, christian women, and a kind and devoted wife and mother, when Mrs. John Gingery passed away rather suddenly at her late home near Brownsville, Fayette County, Pa. Her body was brought to Bellefonte yesterday by the grief-stricken husband and removed to the home of Wallace S. White, near Axe Mann. Funeral services were held today at 9.30 o'clock, interment being made in the Emerick cemetery nearby Snow Shoe Intersection, by the side of a child which died some years ago. The Gingery family at one time resided in that section.

Before her marriage Mrs. Gingery was Anna Cramer, and was born at Pleasant Gap, September 2, 1853, making her age 58 years, 8 months and 19 days. She was the mother of eight children, seven of whom survive to mourn her death. The passing away of Mrs. Gingery was especially sad and a great shock to all. She had been somewhat ill but apparently had recovered, although suffering more or less from asthma. On Monday night, about 11 o'clock, she become suddenly ill and it was quickly seen that her condition was quite serious. She suffered a stroke of paralysis and died about 3.30 o'clock Tuesday morning. Married thirty-six years and during all that period a loving, kindly wife, her sudden death was a great shock to her husband. In all the years of their married life the husband and wife had never so much as an unpleasant word, and their mutual devotion made all the more keen the grief of Mr. Gingery when he realized that his wife had passed away.

The surviving children are Mrs. Florence Gentile, of British Columbia; William H. Gingery, John Leslie Gingery, George Gingery and George Dewey Gingery, all of Brownsville; Mrs. Mary Masco, of near Masontown, Fayette County, and James Gross Gingery, of Clairton, Pa. Mr. Gingery is a brother of Grant Gingery, of Clearfield County, and a brother-in-law of Wallace S. White, James Summers and John A. Hoover, of near Axe Mann; Jacob Confer, of Howard; Samuel and George Gingery, of Centre Hall, and David T. Raymond, of Muncy.

RICHESON ELECTROCUTED

Minister Who Killed Avis Linnell, His Sweetheart, Pays Penalty.

Clarence V. T. Richeson, the Ex-Baptist minister who poisoned his sweetheart, Avis Linnell, in order that he might be free to marry another, was electrocuted a few minutes after midnight, on Monday night, at Boston. It was seven minutes from the time the current was applied until Richeson was pronounced dead.

Richeson walked to the chair erect, his eyes straight ahead until he sat down. Then he closed his eyes and kept them shut until the end.

Seated in the chair, he wss asked a series of questions by the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, his spiritual adviser.

During his answers he said: "God will take care of my soul and I pray for all. I forgive everybody." The last of the questions was: "Are you willing to die for Jesus sake?" The reply in an even, well modulated tone was simply: "I am willing to die."

The current applied was of 1,900 volts, eight amperes. One application was sufficient.

W. C. Thompson, of Howard, was a genial caller at "The Republican" on Monday.

Indian Princess to Visit Us.

A beautiful Indian maiden, a princess of the famous Cherokee tribe, has charmed the world by her beauty and gracefulness. The Misses Shope, of Bellefonte, were guests Tuesday at the Green home.

Edward Taylor, of Charlton, spent a few days with Howard friends last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lionel Walker, of Avis, were visitors with Howard friends last week.

Miss Alverda Welch, of Lock Haven, was a guest this week at the home of I. R. Williams.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Thompson, of Orviston, were visitors in town on Tuesday.

Mrs. John A. Thompson, of Tyrone, and son Clair, of Osceola, were guests of Howard relatives for a few days.

Mrs. Will McGhee, of McGhees Mills, visited friends here several days last week.

Councilman-blacksmith Charles E. Pletcher spent several days this week in Williamsport.

Edward Bullock and family on Tuesday moved to this place from Julian and are located in the B. F. Holter property on Main Street.

Mrs. Florence Rumberger, of Renovo, was an arrival in Howard on Tuesday to visit friends.

Mrs. Charles McMurtrie went to Tyrone last Wednesday by train and returned Friday driving the family horse which had been there.

Edward Robb, of Avis, and David Robb, of Harrisburg, were week end visitors with their brother, John M. Robb.

Harvey Robb and family, of Lock Haven, were visitors with friends on Marsh Creek the latter part of the week.

Lloyd Daughenbaugh and Samuel Pletcher have gone to Penn Yan, N. Y., where they will be employed during the summer.

William Quay, carrier on rural route No. 2, spent a few days with his daughter at Corning, N. Y., and reports her recovering from a recent illness.

John Hayes, who is now located at Berwick, was an over Sunday visitor with his mother, Mrs. James Hayes, and family.

David B. Schenck, one of the well known farmers of the township, has been quite ill the past few days with pneumonia, his condition being slightly improved at this writing.

Mrs. William Pletcher, of Eaglesmere, and Mrs. Edward Casselberry, of Williamsport, were called to Howard this week by the serious illness of David B. Schenck.

Jerry Ryan, a former resident of this community, but now located and prospering in Buffalo, N. Y., spent a few days at the scenes of his former home and circulated among his many friends.

Captain H. C. Holter spent a few hours in Unionville on Monday, at which place he will soon begin the erection of a handsome dwelling house for Daniel Hall.

Mail carrier W. E. Confer, who was seriously injured in a runaway accident several weeks ago, is slowly improving and is able to be around some with the aid of crutches.

Edward Leathers, of Renovo, visited at his former home here several days, being called by the serious illness of his brother LeRoy, whose condition at this writing is such as to give his friends much concern as to his recovery.

Rev. J. E. Dunning will leave this week for Carlisle where he will attend the annual commencement exercises of Dickinson college. During his stay there Mrs. Dunning will visit his parents in Williamsport.

D. T. Allison was on Monday sworn in as constable for the borough to continue the term of LeRoy Leathers, whose illness has made it necessary for him to resign. Mr. Allison had held the office for several terms previously and the duties enjoined upon him are in no wise new to him. He had been acting in Mr. Leathers' place for some time.

The matter of the erection of a building suitable for a town hall has received some consideration from several of our citizens, but whether or not it will result in anything definite is a matter of conjecture. That such a building is needed is beyond dispute but the question as to the amount to be realized from the investment is the one that the projectors are giving the most serious consideration. There are several available locations and either of them would be suitable. It is to be hoped that this is one of our dreams soon to be realized.

In this correspondence last week the writer did not give the date of the memorial sermon to Grove Brothers Post, but as custom appoints the Sunday preceding Memorial day the error was not a serious one. The veterans anticipate a large turnout next Sunday afternoon for the annual sermon which will be preached this year in the Methodist church by Rev. W. H. Patterson. The Memorial day services will be held as usual in the afternoon of that day. An innovation this year will be the assistance of the newly organized camp of Sons of Veterans. The once flourishing Post has dwindled to a mere handful of men and the Sons are recognized as the legal heirs for the perpetuation of the day to keep hallowed their sacred memories. The decorating committee requests that all persons be liberal in supplying flowers, which may be left at the home of H. C. Holter, where they will be nicely arranged for the purpose intended by the ladies in charge of this work.

While plowing with a spirited young team, J. D. Neidigh allowed them to run away, and they mashed up a new Oliver plow. The horses frightened at a bunch of sheep that were on a stampede.

C. H. Meyers, of No. 276, John Wright, of Boalsburg Lodge, J. W. Miller, of State College Lodge, and Musser Ward, of Stormstown, are representatives to the Grand Lodge I. O. O. F. in session this week at Reading.

Will McElany, of Stone valley, enroute for State College, tarried a while in town chatting with friends of olden times. He purchased a thoroughbred Durham bull from the State College herd. He wants no mongrels in his yard.

Over 100 invited guests attended the Samuel Everhart reception held at his mother's home near Franklinville last Saturday evening. Many of them failed to get home in time for Sunday school. Everybody present had a most enjoyable time. The calithumpians got in their work and made the night hideous. They had tried it the night before, but Sam was at the phone and quickly made arrangements so that he and his bride were absent from home when the noise-makers arrived. The latter departed with a vow to get even, and they certainly succeeded.

Playing Coachman

It Created Important Complications

By EDNA CRUIKSHANK

Three young men sat about a table, guzzling and smoking, at the Meadowcreek Hunt club. They were Bert Stevens, Jim Galloway and Ned Howland. It was not the hunting season, and these gentlemen, whose lives were absorbed in hunting, horses and hounds, had little amusement, so they lounged, chaffed one another and made bets whenever they could find an uncertainty. They could well afford to do so because every one of them was rich. The subject turned upon what they would do if they should have to go to work.

"I would hire for a chauffeur," said Stevens.

"If I went in for that sort of thing," said Howland, "I'd hire for a coachman. I have no fancy for a dead machine, but I love a live horse."

"I'd like to see you in livery," said Galloway.

"I'll bet you a thousand," said Stevens to Howland, "that you can't pass yourself off for a coachman."

"I'll bet you a thousand I can."

Stevens took out a pocket check book, wrote a check and handed it to Galloway, daring Howland to cover it.

"But I should have to prove that I can, and that would involve getting a situation or keeping it for a stipulated time."

"So you would. It would be a lark, wouldn't it?"

"I don't know that it would."

"Try it, Ned," urged the stakeholder.

Howland didn't consent just then, but he did later, and an additional $1,000 was left in Galloway's hands as stakes for the following bet: Howland to secure a place as coachman and keep it four weeks without any member of the family for whom he worked knowing that he was a gentleman. But if his identity was discovered through any means not in accord with the spirit in which the bet was made the bet was to be considered a draw. When all was settled Stevens said:

"I'll bet you another thousand, Ned, that if there is an unmarried woman in the family you serve between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five you run away with her within your term of service."

"Done," said Howland, and Galloway was handed the additional stake by each party to the wager.

It was not long after this that Mr. Edmond Delano, who had gone, with his family, to his country place for the summer, received a note from an employment agency that an excellent opportunity had occurred to hire an elegant coachman. Mr. Delano directed the man to be sent up at once. He was surprised to see a handsome young fellow of athletic build, though shabbily dressed.

"Your name?" asked Mr. Delano.

"Patrick Horne."

"You're not Irish, are you? You have no brogue."

"My grandfather was an Irishman."

So he was and a baronet.

Ned Howland was engaged and when he reported for duty appeared in a brand new livery, in which he looked more like a major general than a coachman. There were five young ladies in the family between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five, so that his bet with Stevens should have been five to one in Howland's favor, and as every one of the girls was a beauty even greater odds than this should have been given.

The eldest daughter, Miss Margaret Delano, was fully the coachman's age. Besides, she was rather strong minded, having charge of a section devoted to archaeology in the woman's club of which she was a member. Miss Edith was twenty-three and eminently sensible.

Miss Annette was twenty and devoted to society. She directed the social affairs of the family. Then came Miss Gertrude, inclined to be lackadaisical, while the baby girl, Miss Jacqueline, or Jack, as she was universally called, aged seventeen, was the very flower of the family garden.

Since each and every one of these young ladies was attractive it was evident that Howland, to use a Hibernicism, had walked into a hornets' nest. The eldest treated him as a coachman, and as a coachman he was in no danger from her; but, as for the rest of the girls, from the first there were constant bickerings among them as to which one should drive out with him, he either holding the reins or sitting in the rumble.

There was constant danger of Mr. Howland running across some one who knew him, though he had shaved off a full beard, and his livery also changed his appearance. Fortunately he knew no one in the place where he served, and the Delanos were an old family, not inclined to mix much with the commercial aristocracy of the present day. But one afternoon Stevens and Galloway, who knew where Howland was, appeared on the street as he was riding by in the rumble of Miss Jacqueline's pony cart. The girl was turned square away from the pony, chatting and laughing with her footman, when he espied his two friends looking at him, their sides shaking with laughter. He was leaning forward at the time, gazing into the girl's sparkling eyes, but on catching sight of his cronies straightened up, folded his arms and became a veritable lackey.

As soon as Ned got back to the stable he went to his room over it and wrote his friends that if they ever appeared in the place again he would call the bet off. This scared them off, as far as appearing openly on the forbidden ground was concerned, but so eager were they to see the game that they made themselves up in different disguises and took frequent trips there for the purpose. Though Howland did not know it, many a time when he had forgotten that he was a lackey and was deeply engrossed with a young lady in the vehicle with him rather than with the horses the two spies were witnesses to his behavior. They came to know the different ladies he drove, and it was not long before the young men began to bet as to which one of the sisters would get him.

It should be understood that whatever of rivalry Howland excited he was always spoken of in the family and treated as Patrick, the coachman. Miss Delano never even admitted to herself that she looked upon him in any other light. Miss Annette once spoke of him with enthusiasm to her sister Edith and received a severe frowning down for her admiration of a serving man. Miss Gertrude permitted herself to think of him occasionally when reading novels, wondering if he would turn out a hero in disguise. It was Jacqueline alone who was secretly carrying on a wild flirtation with the coachman, who never betrayed herself to any member of the family as taking any interest in him whatever. But Jacqueline was one of those apparently proper young ladies in whose mouths butter wouldn't melt.

And so the comedy went on. Howland, who did not realize just how he stood, wrote Stevens that he was sure to win both bets and as soon as the test was over he would "blow in" his winnings in an evening's entertainment at the Hunt club, to include the three persons interested. He was not aware that Stevens and Galloway had taken rooms in a house near Castle Delano, where they could see him drive out, and knew more about how fast he was getting on than he knew himself. Stevens had darkened his complexion, added to his whiskers and dressed like one of the common people. Galloway had reversed the process by shaving a part of his beard and whitening his face, his dress being that of a newly imported Britisher. In an automobile they followed the spurious coachman when he drove the young ladies, sometimes keeping at a distance behind him and sometimes debouching and going much faster than he, heading him off. At first they were fearful he might notice that he was being shadowed, but soon discovered that when with the youngest Miss Delano he was too absorbed in her to permit his noticing any one else.

Gradually they began to know the days and the hours that Howland and Jacqueline went out together and that these outings were becoming more and more frequent. Indeed, so frequent were they that the two shadowers wondered if the young lady's family did not suspect something was going on between the two. The truth is that Jacqueline was so adept at making excuses for going out attended only by the coachman and put on so much innocence in the matter that she was not suspected, or, if she was, it was only by some of her sisters, who were trying to play the same game, for it must be admitted that Howland was too gallant to repress any favor they might show him.

The time was now rapidly coming on when the bets must be lost or won. One afternoon Stevens and Galloway who were ever on the watch, saw a two wheeled cart driven up to the porte-cochere of Castle Delano by their friend. While he was waiting they saw him pull out and push back a suit case under the seat. Presently Miss Jacqueline Delano came out with another suit case, which she handed to "Patrick."

"Come," said Stevens. "We must get out the auto. Those suit cases seem to indicate that something is up."

It was not long before they were behind the couple in the cart and, keeping at a safe distance, followed them to a village where, stopping before a house next a church, the coachman tied his horse and the two went inside.

"I've won the second bet," said Stevens.

"What makes you think so?"

"They've gone into a parsonage."

The two young men waited a few minutes, then, going up on to the porch of the house the elopers had entered and finding the door unlocked, went in quietly, attracting no attention. The couple were being married, and the clergyman was calling upon whomsoever knew aught why they should not be joined together to speak or ever after hold his peace when Stevens stepped forward and said:

"I forbid the banns!"

Howland turned and saw his friend smiling at him. The bride, naturally, looked astonished.

"I need a best man," cried the groom—"two of them. Step up here, gentlemen," and he introduced the men to his bride. She was rather disturbed at their ordinary appearance, for Howland had told her who he was, and she expected his friends would be swells. However, there were no further interruptions to the service, and after it was over all was explained. The same evening there were further explanations in Castle Delano as to the identity of the supposed coachman and the elopement.

Howland took his wife to the Hunt club, where he gave a supper to her two of her sisters and his two friends. He had won both bets.

Treated Her to a Speech.

I remember Winston Churchill as a young fellow, very much in society when he wished to be and as any cousin of a duke could be, but an enfant terrible to many a hostess, leaving his manners at home when he went out to dine and apparently some place else when guests came to his mother's house. Shortly after his return from South Africa he offered to show me his interesting souvenirs of the Boer war. But when we were en tete-a-tete he became so absorbed in discussing the question of the Boer government that I found myself, to my amazement, listening to an oration of three-quarters of an hour. He turned his back upon me, striding over to a long mirror to deliver to his own reflection there, with numerous gestures and facial contortions, wheeling around at the finish to say, "It just occurred to me what a capital speech that would make in the house of commons some day." (This was before he had ever won a seat.) "I wanted to get it fixed in my mind before I forgot it."—From "Intimacies of Court and Society," by the Widow of an American Diplomat.

His Real Motive.

General F. D. Grant at a Washington's birthday dinner in New York some years ago told a story about a young Boston Tory.

"This Tory," he said, "fought during the Revolution neither on one side nor on the other. He took a pleasure trip on the continent, and he didn't come back home again until the war was over. He was treated very coldly by society on his return, and this grieved his good old mother to the heart. The dear old lady tried to explain the matter one afternoon to a Boston belle.

"'Naturally, as the head of the family,' she said, 'my son could not take part in the war. To him fell the duty, perhaps the more arduous duty, of protecting his mother and sisters and looking after the interests of the estate.'

"'Oh, madam,' said the belle, with an icy smile, 'you need not explain. I assure you I'd have done exactly as your son did—I'm such a coward!'"

Thrifty Papa and His Son.

A young Scotch friend of mine of high literary reputation generally spends once a year a month with his family on the outskirts of Edinburgh. His father is a minister occupying a very enviable position. On the day of his departure my friend invariably finds on the breakfast table by the side of his plate a little paper carefully folded. It is a detailed account of the meals he has had during his visit to his father's house—in other words, his bill. But the son is as thrifty as papa and does not part with his coin before he has ascertained that all the items are accurate and the addition correct.

"Why, father," said he, "I see you have marked the bacon and eggs for my yesterday's breakfast. I assure you I did not touch the eggs."

"You were wrong not to do so, then, my boy. They were on the table. Why didn't you help yourself?"—Paul Blouet (Max O'Rell).

Jealous Fishes In a Duel.

"Fish are liable to the same passions as you and I, and they fight and love as we do," said Dr. Francis Ward. "I can show you a photograph of a rainbow trout in what would have been a fight to the death if I had not interfered. In a pond were a big female trout and her partner, who resented the intrusion of another trout. Suddenly one fish charged the other and seized him by the jaw. He shook his opponent as a dog shakes a rat and kept on until his enemy floated to the top. Then I took the fish out and revived it with a little weak whisky and water."—London Mail.

Too Realistic.

"Ma," said the little boy, "will you let me take baby out in the perambulator? Bob Carr an' Billy Pitt an' me we're goin' to play at a railway accident. The perambulator is to be the train, an' baby's to be the passenger who's pitched out on his head, an' he's to be saved from bein' run over by another train just in time." Three hours later when the baby was safely in bed the little boy was released from the coal cellar.—New York Journal.

Fast Time.

An Irishman while standing on the deck of a steamship which was bound for America was interested in watching the descent of a diver. Upon the arrival of Pat in New York he was astonished to behold a diver just appearing above the surface of the water. Going to the rail of the vessel, he shouted to him, "Faith, sor, and ye got over as quickly as meself!"—Exchange.

A Lingering Regret.

"I think it is disgraceful to be enormously rich."

"Oh, so do I! I was brought up to think that way. But, say"—

"Well?"

"Don't you wish once in awhile that you weren't so blamed respectable?"—Toledo Blade.

The Verdict.

Prisoner—I didn't steal the horse. I only took him from the fellow what stole him.

"Shure! I phoned that to the vigilance committee, but it's no go. They phoned me to hang up the receiver."—Life.

One Day.

Finish every day and be done with it. You have done what you could. Some blunders and absurdities no doubt crept in. Forget them as soon as you can.—Emerson.

Wise men change their minds if they grow wiser.—Life.

Literature and Slang.

"Booze," as a word connected with taking strong waters, dates back two centuries, and in the spelling "bouze" may be found at even as remote a date as 1300. "Fresh," in its signification of forward, comes from 1803. "Some pumpkins," popular slang in bucolic circles, is of ancient lineage. "Gab" has been slang for a century. "Stag," on the fence between slang and English, has survived generations. In the Knickerbocker Magazine of 1856 we find an author telling of "a party of old bricks who * * * are keeping up a small stag party at the end of the room." "Squelch" in the seventeenth century was in good use. Of two words in vogue to express drunkenness half a century ago "tight" is much alive, while "whittled" has been dropped. There are no fixed laws to gauge the life of slang or to predict its entrance into the language. Will "highbrow," for example, find its way into the mouths of grandchildren yet unborn, or will it take its place in the ranks of absolute curiosities?—Collier's Weekly.

Wreck of the White Ship.

The most famous of all royal shipwrecks is probably that of the White Ship, which gave Rossetti the subject of one of his finest ballads. Henry I. had crossed to France to secure the allegiance of the Norman barons and was returning in triumph. Prince William, the king's favorite son, did not sail aboard his father's vessel, but followed in the White Ship, commanded by Fitz-Stephen, the royal hereditary pilot. Somewhere in midchannel the White Ship separated from the fleet and went down with all on board, and Henry "never smiled again."

That historically stifled smile also gave rise to the ribald verse—it came, one thinks, from some Twainish American:

Many a wicked smile he smole,
And many a wink he wunk,
But never, never smole again
After the White Ship sunk.

—London Spectator.

Ermine Is the Royal Fur.

The fame of the ermine as a creature "patronized by royalty" dates back to the reign of King Edward III., who made it a punishable offense for any person except those of royal birth to wear the fur of this handsome little animal. This tyrannous restriction has been long removed, but ermine, of course, is still the royal fur and probably owes its long continued popularity as an article of personal adornment more to that fact than anything else. It has, however, the great drawback of losing its pristine whiteness after a few years, while, owing to the variation in the quality of the fur found on different animals of the tribe, ermine is far harder to match than many other skins employed in the making of human apparel.—London Globe.

The Jerusalem Chamber.

One of the rooms in Westminster abbey that are of peculiar interest is the Jerusalem chamber, which was built more than 500 years ago and was probably at one time the abbot's withdrawing room. It was in this chamber that Henry IV. died, in curious fulfillment of a prophecy that he should die in Jerusalem:

It hath been prophesied me many a year
I shall not die but in Jerusalem,
Which vainly I supposed the Holy Land.
But bear me to that chamber. There I'll lie.
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die.

And in the same chamber Addison, Congreve and Prior lay in state before their splendid interment in the abbey.

Killed by Imagination.

A workman on the Siberian railway was accidentally locked into a refrigerator car and was afterward found dead. Imagining that he was being slowly frozen to death, he had recorded his sufferings with a piece of chalk on the floor. The refrigerating apparatus, however, was out of order, and the temperature in the car had not fallen below 50 degrees F. throughout the journey.

Identified by an Old Habit.

"It was a clever job," said the chief. "How did you spot him through his woman's disguise?"

"I happened to see him sit down," replied the detective, "and noticed that he gave his skirt a little twitch with both hands, as if to keep it from bagging at the knees. Then I nabbed him."—London Tit-Bits.

Proved.

"But do you think you can support a wife?"

"Of course. Why, we've been engaged two years."

"Well?"

"Well, if I can buy flowers and candy for a fiancee for two years and not go broke I can surely support a wife!"

An Ordinance.

Granting the Milesburg Electric Company, its successors, lessees and assigns, the right to construct, operate and maintain poles, wires, cables and fixtures, together with the necessary supports upon, over, along and under the streets, highways, foot-walks, lanes and alleys of the Borough of Milesburg, Centre County, Pennsylvania.

BE IT ORDAINED AND ENACTED by the Council of the Borough of Milesburg, County of Centre and State of Pennsylvania, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same.

SECTION 1. That the privileges be and is hereby granted in perpetuity to the Milesburg Electric Company, its successors, lessees and assigns, to construct, operate and maintain the necessary poles, wires, cables, conduits and fixtures, together with the necessary supports upon, over, along and under the streets, highways, foot-walks, lanes and alleys of said Borough as may be necessary for the purpose of constructing, operating and maintaining its lines through the said Borough and to the places of business, works, manufacturing establishments, offices and houses of subscribers within the Borough limits adjacent thereto, subject to the conditions and regulations hereinafter contained.

SECTION 2. That the said Milesburg Electric Company shall replace the streets, highways, foot-walks, lanes and alleys of said Borough upon which it may place any of its poles, conduits, lines or fixtures as aforesaid, in as good condition as they were before said poles and fixtures were erected thereon, and further, that all poles and fixtures as aforesaid shall be placed wherever practicable on alleys, and the location of said poles and conduits shall be made under the direction and supervision of the Street Committee of the Council of the Borough aforesaid.

SECTION 3. That all poles erected under the provisions of this Ordinance shall be reasonably straight, painted and kept painted, and that no cross arms for the suspension of wires or cables shall be placed at a less distance than twenty feet from the grade of the street, unless by permission of said Council.

SECTION 4. The said Milesburg Electric Company shall pay a pole tax of twenty (20) cents per pole per year to the Borough of Milesburg, and the said Borough shall have the privilege free of charge to erect wires for fire and police purposes on the poles of the said Milesburg Electric Company.

SECTION 5. The said Milesburg Electric Company shall commence work within one (1) year and complete the erection of their plant in the Borough of Milesburg within two (2) years from the date of this Ordinance, otherwise this Ordinance becomes null and void and of no effect.

SECTION 6. The said Milesburg Electric Company shall be liable for all damages by reason of erecting, operating and maintaining its plant in the Borough of Milesburg, Pennsylvania.

SECTION 7. The said Milesburg Electric Company shall be governed by all legal ordinances of a general nature now in force or that may hereafter be enacted.

SECTION 8. The said Milesburg Electric Company shall, within thirty days after the passage and approval of this ordinance, file with the Secretary of Council its certificate of acceptance of all the terms, conditions and provisions of this ordinance, and that the said Company shall pay the expenses incident to the passage and publication thereof.

SECTION 9. That any ordinance or part of ordinance conflicting with the provisions of this ordinance be and the same is hereby repealed so far as the same conflicts with this ordinance.

ORDAINED AND ENACTED into a law this Twenty-second day of April A. D. 1912.

To Again Urge State Fair.

"The next Legislature will be asked to establish a State fair. We feel that the time is ripe for it and that this great Commonwealth with its extensive recognition," said W. C. Norton, of Wayne county, who has been active in every movement for the establishment of a fair for years. Mr. Norton was the author of the State fair bill in the sessions of 1909 and 1911. "The idea of a State fair would be for a permanent exposition ground, the best location being Harrisburg at which the best exhibits of the county fairs could be assembled, so that it would be a purely State affair," continued Mr. Norton. "A healthy rivalry among counties would have a fine effect. Pennsylvania should get into line with other States and have a State fair."

Wedded in Jail.

Charles Chesney and Miss Mary A. Lucas were secretly married in the Miffin county jail, at Lewistown last Thursday, Justice of the Peace Allen A. Orr officiating. The groom was convicted of selling liquor illegally on Sunday and to minors at the late term of quarter sessions and sentenced to nine months and $500. Chesney is 41 and the bride is only 20. The license was procured before Chesney's arrest a month ago and the bride insisted on the ceremony being performed. Rev. M. S. Cressman, of St. John's Lutheran church, declined the honor of officiating, not so much owing to the surrounding as to the fact that Chesney had done time for bigamy.

In Search Of Ananias

He Was Equal to the Occasion

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"Barnabas, no matter how many stories you may tell, remember I can always ketch you in every one. Just you wait until I put on my white apron and get my knitting. Now go ahead, Barnabas, and make Miss Telham's hair curl with some of them outrageous yarns of yours."

So after Captain Barnabas had thrown some more driftwood on the andirons (for a cold easterly storm was raging without) and Maria Fish had brought in a glass dish of mammoth red apples we settled ourselves in our several chairs.

"Now for the story about the cook!" I urged.

"Lawsy me, Barnabas, can't you tell about something not quite so commonplace as cooks?" cut in Maria with disgust. "I'd like to hear about some of them tropycal islands, and I'm sure Miss Telham would too."

"This is about tropical islands as well as cooks, Maria," explained the captain as he lighted his customary pipe. "As I was telling Miss Telham here, something she said reminded me of a cook we had aboard the old Indus thirty years ago. It happened when we was off Ferry island, laying becalmed for two days.

"The Pacific was as smooth as a freshly ironed handkerchief or a mirror or something like that. It reflected the clouds at sunrise and sunset and took on all the colors of the rainbow, but the rest of the day it was as blue as the sky that stared down into it.

"All hands lay around and waited for a breeze, and naturally after a spell they got mischievous. Ananias Sline, he was our cook then—his first voyage, too, and he was a greenhorn if ever one shipped before the mast! The men complained about his cooking, but so far as I could see what he put on the cabin table wasn't much worse than my other cooks had turned out. But Ananias wasn't slow in learning sea ways.

"At the end of the first day all hands were feeling peevish. Ferry island lay an eighth of a mile distant and some of them had been wanting to go ashore and look for fruit and turtle eggs. I put it off till the next day because I was expecting a whiff of wind every minute, and when Ananias had piped all hands to supper the calm was 'still raging,' as Billy Sparks, my mate, used to say.

"When Ananias brought the platter of salt beef and set it in front of Finley Beale, who had been in my fo'c'sle for a dozen years, old Beale rose up and, raising his hands over the salt beef, gave the sailor's blessing—so they called it. Says he:

"'Old hoss, old hoss, how came you here?

"'From'—

"He stopped there and glared at Ananias Sline, who had turned in his steps and was listening with his eyes popping out, silly like.

"'Cooky,' roars Beale, pointing his knife at the pale Ananias, 'did you cook this here poor old hoss?'

"'Tain't a hoss!' cheeped Ananias, frightened like.

"'What is it, eh?'

"'It's first class salt beef—it says so on the barrel.' Ananias kinder spunked up courage now because he thought he was telling 'em something they didn't know.

"'First class salt beef, eh? First class salt hoss, cooky, and don't you sass me again, understand? This was first class salt hoss till you cooked it. Now git out!'

"Ananias tried to get out, but somehow all the men got into the spirit of the thing, and first one tossed a biscuit at him, and another flung a bone, and then a big piece of cold plum duff struck him in the eye, and he went bawling like a baby. The men seemed to feel better after that and eat their supper quite amiable.

"Along about two bells I was sitting on deck, smoking this here very pipe and talking to Billy Sparks. We was watching a great big round moon rise up from the very edge of the sea—that's the way it looked to us.

"'What was that, captain?' asked Billy, quick-like.

"'What was what?' I asked him, but just at that minute I saw it, too, and it did look queer.

"Against the big yellow moon we could see the small black shadow of a man's head and shoulders. Up his arms would go in an overstroke, one after the other. Then he disappeared.

"'First time I ever seen the man in the moon,' said Billy Sparks, still staring over the rail toward the island.

"'What was it—a native?'

"'Guess so, though I'm sure this island is uninhabited. Maybe a party of 'em from the Wearys come over to gather turtle eggs. Perhaps he was prospecting around the Indus—aha! There goes the lubber—see, captain, against the white beach!'

"Billy pointed toward the island, and I looked and could see plain enough in the moonlight that flooded the white sandy beach of the island a moving black shadow that was presently blotted out in the dark shadow of the jungle growth.

"We sat there awhile longer, watching the moon rise above the sea and light up the tall palms and cocoanuts of the island. I had knocked out my pipe and was for turning in when one of the watch came shuffling toward me.

"'Excuse me, sir,' said he, 'but we can't find Cooky.'

"'Cooky' was their pet name for Ananias Sline, you know.

"'Well, what do you want to find him for? Ain't you had your grub?' I asked him.

"'Yes, sir, that ain't it—only he ain't on the ship!'

"'Ain't on the ship? Where is he then?'

"'We don't know, sir.'

"'Maybe he's fell overboard,' suggested Billy Sparks.

"'He can swim, sir.'

"I thought things over for a minute. Billy Sparks had just been telling me the episode in the fo'castle when the men fired plum duff at Ananias.

"'There's one of two things has happened,' I said, leading the way for'ard.

"'Yes, sir?' says the man Jenks.

"'He's either run away because you've hurt his feelings, Ananias is sensitive, he is, or—or Cooky was stunned when you fetched him a blow with that heavy plum duff and he's lying insensible around somewheres,' I tells them.

"'He ain't aboard the Indus—we've searched her from stem to stern.'

"'You gone aloft, too?'

"'Yes, sir.

"'Then he's swum ashore,' I said. 'You've skeered the only cook we've got aboard, so's he taken to the jungle ruther'n serve aboard the Indus. Billy, you get some bits of rope yarn and let 'em draw lots as to who'll go ashore and fetch cooky back.'

"They didn't have nothing to say—maybe they were glad at the freedom I was offering. They had been wanting to go and get turtle eggs and fruit.

"So they drew lots, and old Beales and Jenks drawed the short bits and they jumped into one of the boats and rowed ashore. All hands stood by the rail and watched 'em till they disappeared in the jungle. Pretty soon we thought we heard distant shouts; then all was still.

"It was too quiet to be very comfortable for the rest of us, and after an hour had passed they drawed lots again and two more men set off for the island.

"When they didn't come back after another had gone I began to get anxious, and so I sent all the rest of the men, headed by the mate, ashore, telling 'em to send up some rockets if all went well with 'em.

"While they were all off looking for Ananias Sline I can tell you I was feeling mighty lonesome, especially after I'd heard sounds of a melee ashore, followed by the usual silence, and no rockets. I was uncomfortable, too, for here I was all alone in charge of the Indus and all my men had been either killed by some wild animal or savage or captured. I couldn't think of anything else to explain what had happened.

"Then I heard a swash, swash of somebody swimming toward the Indus, and I leaned over the rail and made out a man's head. He was coming with an overhand stroke like the man in the moon we had seen hours ago and which Billy Sparks had thought might be the missing cook.

"I hailed him, but he didn't answer until he hauled himself dripping wet over the rail, and who should it be but Ananias Sline, cooky himself.

"'What's the matter ashore?' I asked him after he'd got the water out of his eyes and was wringing out his clothes. 'Where you been?'

"Then Ananias told me, and it was a queer story. Seems he was tearing mad over the way all hands had treated him at supper that night, and, being a revengeful little rat, he'd swum ashore and hid himself in the top of a tall cocoanut palm near the water, jest about in line of where a boat would land if anybody missed him and come to look for him.

"He gathered his arms full of cocoanuts and waited for the searchers after him. Pretty soon they came, Beales and Jenks, and when they got near enough and began to sing out his name crack went a cocoanut against one head and then another. It didn't seem to scare Ananias a bit when them two husky seamen fell down on the sand. He jest set there and waited for some more to come.

"Before the second party reached shore the first two men was coming to, so cooky up and promised 'em another dose if they so much as peeped. The second party went down kinder hard and deadly, but Ananias was so full of revenge he didn't care. When the rest of 'em arrived Ananias was ready with the cocoanuts and pelted 'em so fast that they took to the jungle, thinking a gorilla or something like that was around. Leastways that's what Ananias said, and nobody came back to dispute his word till morning, and then when they all climbed over the rail they was a pretty sheepish looking crew, Billy Sparks and all. I really felt sorry for 'em.

"'Ananias has come back,' I says to 'em kindly, 'and if nobody wants to explain what happened they needn't. Cooky and me will stand watch while all hands goes below and turns in. I think there's wind off there to the southard, and we must get along.'

"They looked kinder grateful and shambled off to bed, but I noticed after that that nobody threw any words or anything else at Ananias Sline till we got in New York harbor."

"And what happened when you arrived in New York?" I asked, with interest.

Captain Barnabas smiled knowingly as he passed the dish of red apples.

"It would be sp'iling another good story to even hint at it," he promised.

An Absent-Minded Professor.

A very absent-minded professor was busily engaged in solving a scientific problem when the nurse hastily opened the library door and announced a great family event.

"The little stranger has arrived, Professor."

"Eh?" said the professor.

"It is a little boy," said the nurse.

"Little boy, little boy," mused the professor. "Well, ask him what he wants."—June Woman's Home Companion.

Beware of Cousins.

Cousins are not as simple as they seem. The very fact of being a cousin or having a cousin is complicated. The laissez faire of cousinship is both eluding and deluding. Cousins will be cousins even if you did not choose them. They can borrow money from you, visit you without being asked, tell people they belong to your family, contest your will, even fall in love with you, and a cousin once removed is twice as apt to. Never completely trust a cousin; never depend on his not doing any of these things; never take him for granted. The "cousinly kiss" may or may not mean what it means, and cousins always do kiss. It's part of being cousins.

Not that cousins need necessarily prove perilous. Once in a blue moon they invite you to Europe or leave you money, but that almost takes an aunt or uncle.—Atlantic.

Wear Slippers In the House.

In England it is the custom not only for grown persons, but also for children, to wear slippers in the house. English children as well as grownups wear shoes as we in America wear rubbers, only out of doors. This is not only a more comfortable custom with regard to footwear than ours, but it is also more healthful. The streets and sidewalks and even the yards are dusty. This dust, full of germs as it is, should not be tracked all over the house. We would do well in the interests of preventive medicine to provide slippers for our children and to insist upon the wearing of them in the house. It is less trouble to change from shoes to slippers, even three or four times a day, than it is to cure an illness the germ of which may have been brought into the nursery on the soles of the children's shoes.—Home Progress.

The Herb of Ferocity.

If you have any reason to suspect that you are too mild mannered, too gentle for this strenuous age, eat catmint. Miss F. A. Bardswell in her book "The Herb Garden" says catmint, one of the ten varieties of mint, is known as the herb of ferocity because of the ferocious disposition it imparts. "The herb when chewed," says Miss Bardswell, "is said to make the most gentle person fierce and quarrelsome. A legend is extant of a certain executioner who could never muster up his courage to the point of hanging till he had partaken of it."

Crushed Again.

"If I have a fault," said Mr. Henpeck, "it is that"—

"If you have 'a' fault?" Mrs. Henpeck broke in. "Ha, ha! Excuse me for laughing. If I have a fault it is that I sometimes permit my sense of humor to get the better of me."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Rhoads and Knisely, the contractors, are this week putting down a concrete extension to the sidewalk in front of Shaffer's hardware store, on Allegheny Street, and also a new concrete walk in front of the Mason's home, next door.

J. W. Coder and Al. Moon, of Blanchard, were court visitors in Bellefonte this week and on Monday were callers at "The Republican" office. Anybody having onion sets for sale should communicate with Mr. Coder, Blanchard, Pa.

Clearwater, the ex-champion pool player of the world, gave a splendid exhibition of fancy shots at the Arcade Billiard Parlors on Monday evening. The place was crowded during the exhibition. Later in the evening he visited the Elks.

We sell for Cash. You carry your own goods home. Our store is on Bishop Street, where rents are cheap. We are reducing the cost of business one-half. This is the reason you can purchase groceries so cheap at the Cash Non-Delivery grocery store.

The sportiug editor of the Philadelphia "Record" in a special review of sports in last Sunday's "Record," noted the following: "Jack Barry, the State College pitcher and football player, is winning games for the Haverhill, Mass., team, of which Lave Cross is the manager. Connie Mack signed Barry for Cross."

Miss Clara Myers and Robert Adams were married on Thursday morning of last week at the Methodist Episcopal parsonage in Bellefonte. They will reside at Altoona, where the groom is employed in the Pennsylvania Railroad machine shops. The bride is a daughter of J. S. Myers, of Tyrone.

The "strong man" who appeared on the Court House diamond in a free exhibition on Monday evening picked up more stray nickels and dimes than one would have supposed were lying around loose in Bellefonte. Some of his feats of strength were remarkable. Just how much money he collected is not known, but the crowd seemed to be in a liberal mood.

Daniel Garman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Corn Garman, formerly of Bellefonte, but now residing in Williamsport, played third base with the Williamsport High School team in last Saturday's baseball game here against the Academy. Dan made some especially fine stops and pick-ups in the infield, but his throwing arm had several kinks in it and spoiled some of his best plays. At that, his playing was such that many persons predict for him considerable success on the diamond.

One of the pleasantest little chats we have enjoyed for many a day was on Monday afternoon, our visitors being Rev. and Mrs. D. J. Frum, of Pleasant Gap. Readers of "The Republican" will recall that a short time ago Mr. Frum severely wrenched the tendons of one ankle, but that despite this painful injury he managed to get about on crutches and preached as usual, seated in a chair. Mr. Frum is a native of Virginia, but was on "the side of the North." He and his wife are very genial and we were rather sorry when they departed for home.

"Liggetts" grape juice,—10c at Green's.

W. E. Hartsock, of Juniata, was visiting with Bellefonte friends over Sunday.

A saving of at least 15% on your groceries at the Cash Non-Delivery grocery store.

"The Republican" wishes to acknowledge receipt and also our appreciation of a kindly letter from J. J. Nolan, one of our readers in Chicago, enclosing a postal money order to renew his subscription another year.

New advertisers in "The Republican" include the well known and progressive Olewine's hardware store, and the Bellefonte Electric Company. The latter is up-to-the-minute in impressing upon housekeepers the conveniences of electric irons in hot weather.

Rev. William Potter VanTries, formerly of Bellefonte but now pastor of the Broad Avenue church, Altoona, delivered an interesting address on "The Relation of the Sunday School to the Community," at a convention last week of the first district Blair County Sunday School Association.

A reader of "The Republican" remarked a day or two ago that she always felt safe in buying articles advertised in this newspaper, arguing that if the goods were not exactly as advertised she would know it, also that where the goods were all right the merchant never hesitated to advertise. When one stops to think about it there is a lot of good, common sense in her argument.

"Eggs is eggs" when the hens are on a strike, also when the hens are out trying to see which can produce the largest. George Robb these days thinks he has a Muncy mountain hen which deserves a blue ribbon. He has been exhibiting an egg which measures 6¼ inches around and 3⅝ inches from end to end. George says that if anybody has an egg to beat this the thing to do is to speak up.

M. Ward Fleming, of the law firm of Crosby and Fleming, of Philipsburg, was in town over Sunday, visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Fleming, and also attending to some matters in court on Monday. When he returned to Philipsburg he was accompanied by his two-year-old son, who has been spending some time with Grandma Fleming and incidentally having the run of the Fleming home.

In a rather lively baseball game last Saturday, the Bellefonte Academy defeated the Williamsport High School team, 8—4. The visitors were in the lead until the sixth inning, when their pitcher blew up and the Academy piled up six runs, clinching a victory. Smith, who was in the box for the Academy, put up a splendid game but received support that was at times very ragged. It was his first game in the box for the Academy and he made a good impression on the crowd.

Two rattling good games of base ball are scheduled for next week, both on Hughes field. On Friday, May 31, the strong University of Pittsburg team will be here to play the Bellefonte Academy, the game being scheduled for 2 o'clock. On the following day, Saturday, June 1, the Juniata College team will meet the Academy here. This game is scheduled for 2 o'clock. Admission to each game will be 25c. The expense assumed in bringing these teams to Bellefonte is quite heavy and a large attendance on both days will be appreciated.

A very genial caller at "The Republican" office on Monday was the venerable Michael Fravel, of Blanchard. He was attending court as a witness in a case from that section of the county. Mr. Fravel is an old Civil war veteran, but one would never suspect that he was more than about 66 years of age. He is in fact 75 years old, although he is so active that one would easily mark him up as at least ten years younger. He has voted for every Republican candidate for President since attaining his majority, but this time he frankly confesses his inability to guess the name of the next Republican nominee. Just as do many others, Mr. Fravel rather looks for the nomination of a candidate who will be neither Taft nor Roosevelt.

C. G. MacAvoy, superintendent of the Bellefonte Electric Company, and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Beezer attended the Knights of Columbus convention at Harrisburg.

Dr. J. M. Brockerhoff is the latest to join the ranks of the automobilists. He is mustering up his nerve to run a car and when he is ready will drive a Ford torpedo runabout.

The Bellefonte High School baseball team yesterday defeated the Lock Haven Normal Reserves, 7—1. The Bellefonte boys put up a splendid game and the result was never in doubt.

"Red" Smith, a member of last year's Academy baseball club, is playing left field for the University of Pittsburg team, which meets the Academy here on Friday afternoon of next week.

Miss Bella Poser, of Huntingdon, is enjoying a few days' visit with her aunt, Mrs. Walter Cohen, on Spring Street. Miss Poser was recently operated on for appendicitis in the Lock Haven hospital, and she is now recuperating and recovering her strength.

W. Homer Crissman, right hand man to F. H. Thomas of the Bellefonte Central, was a victim of lumbago for several days this week. Carrying a cane was too much for Homer, however, and he throw it away, and strange to say most of the lumbago went with it.

Bellefonte Castle K. G. E., No. 357, and L. G. E., No. 148 will hold a memorial service for the deceased members of their orders on the evening of Thursday, May 30th, at 8 o'clock. A fine program is being prepared, and the public are cordially invited to be present at that time.

J. W. Sunday, of Pine Grove Mills, accompanied by his daughters, Mrs. Lizzie McWilliams and Miss Ida Sunday, visited Bellefonte between trains yesterday. While in town Mr. Sunday was a welcome caller at "The Republican" office. His mission in town was to look after some details for the Memorial Day services at home. His daughters took advantage of his coming to town to accompany him and do a little shopping.

Clarence E. Furst, son of W. G. Furst, of Patton township, is a member of this year's graduating class of the West Chester State Normal School. Before going to West Chester he taught school three terms in Patton township. During the time he has been a student at West Chester he has become a strong debater and last year was on the West Chester debating team which defeated the Lock Haven State Normal. Friends of Mr. Furst will be gratified to learn that he has won a place on this year's debating team of the Moore Literary Society of the West Chester Normal, and will participate in the interscholastic debate with Lock Haven. Selections on the team are eagerly sought by students at West Chester and are only awarded after competitive tests, the three strongest debaters in the school being chosen. Centre County has reason to be proud of the fact that of the three strongest debaters at West Chester one should be a Centre County boy.

Forty-eight years ago, when Rev. James P. Hughes was conducting the famous old Edge Hill School, he had occasion to expel a boy who insisted upon breaking the school discipline. Not long ago, while in a reminiscent mood, Mr. Hughes happened to recall the incident and having occasion to write to a friend in New Jersey he casually inquired whether the "boy" was still living. The "boy" learned of the inquiry, which also conveyed to him the information that Mr. Hughes was still living. With little or no ceremony he packed his satchel and traveled all the way from New York to Bellefonte and walking up to the Academy he introduced himself to Mr. Hughes. The visitor was A. G. Cattell, now a prosperous business man in New York. He said that his only mission here was to see his old school master and thank him for giving him his first lesson in discipline. He spent one night and a part of two days in Bellefonte, returning to New York delighted with his visit. He remarked as he was leaving town that he fully expected to return to Bellefonte with his family when Mr. Hughes celebrates his one-hundredth birthday anniversary.
